Speaker A If you ask me, I think guinea pigs are perfect pets. To begin with, they're just cute. They do look adorable. I have never met a person who doesn't find them pretty. Moreover, guinea pigs are very friendly. Normally, they won't bite you unless you scare them by accident. Well sometimes they'll nibble on your fingers if you have vegetables in your hand but it's usually an accident. Finally, they're pretty easy to take care of. Just remember to have two of them.

Speaker B In my opinion, guinea pigs are cute but you should remember that they need a lot of exercise. They need somewhere to walk as an exercise wheel is not suitable for. As for me, I leave mine on the floor in my room when I'm at home and put it in the cage only when I go to school. Their cages must be large enough for them to move about and stay healthy. You know, some vets say you can't have only one guinea pig. I imagine a cage for two guinea pigs must be huge.

Speaker C I think guinea pigs are a great choice for you if you want an animal that displays interesting behaviors that are generally easy to interpret. Guinea pigs have a modest but functional vocabulary for interacting with each other and their owners. They are capable of asking for food and attention, letting you know that they want to be put back in their homes, which is very convenient for avoiding minor accidents. I love watching my guinea pig a lot.

Speaker D I think a guinea pig will suit you if you want an animal with a personality. Every guinea pig I've had has had its own preferences, tolerances, and tendencies. Right now, I'm dealing with two extremes—Leroy, who actively begs for food and trades toenail clipping sessions for treats, and Blackie, who almost never lets me pet him, let alone pick him up when he's not eating. You see, food and treats can motivate even the least sociable guinea pig to sit still for a back scratching.

Speaker E My younger sister has been asking for a pet for ages, and my parents have finally made up their minds to buy a guinea pig. I think it was the right choice for a small kid, as guinea pigs are relatively low-maintenance. Kids can easily learn their care and feeding routines and do them with minimum supervision. They are relatively quiet but will squeal with joy when you appear with a treat in a hand. They don't bite, which is also important for my sister.

Speaker F I used to think that guinea pigs are the cheapest species ever, as you can easily adopt one for free. I couldn't be more wrong. When I bought a guinea pig, I found out that their huge cages cost a fortune, about $50, dollars, or even more. They need a lot of hay, which is certainly not cheap either. You must also feed them with fresh fruit and veggies on a regular basis. Give them some special vitamins and whatnot. Don't forget the vets. They are rare and charge a lot.

Mary: Oh, hi, John. I'm glad to see you, too. I'm so-so, actually.

John: Really? What's up? Aren't you enjoying your summer holidays?

Mary: Summer holidays are always great, John. Of course, I'm happy about not having to get up early in the morning and do piles of homework.

John: What's the matter, then?

Mary: Well, remember my grandparents gave me a generous check for my birthday?

John: Do I remember? I was green with envy. If I got that money, I would go travel somewhere.

Mary: Well, I decided not to travel anywhere very far this year. I might take a tour of Scottish castles and lakes. Miranda, my best friend, took it last year, and she has amazing photos. Those. I'd love to see it all with my own eyes.

John: I guess it's going to be a truly unforgettable experience, but you'll still have a lot of money left. Will you go on a shopping spree?

Mary: Certainly not. That would be a very unwise thing to do. My grandparents have probably saved this money for a couple of years. I want to do something good and memorable.

John: You could give the money to charity.

Mary: My granny could have done it herself if that was the purpose.

John: Okay, I agree with you there. I say, why don't you redecorate your room? You would certainly enjoy the result and it will always remind you of your grandparents.

Mary: Oh, John, that's not a bad idea. My room does look a bit shabby and needs repairing.

John: See, I knew you'd like that.

Mary: Now I have another problem. The last time my room was repaired, ages ago, my mum and dad made all the decisions about the wallpaper and the furniture and things like that. Now, I want it to be different.

John: Of course, now you have a chance to do everything the way you want.

Mary: The thing is, I don't know exactly what I want. I just have some images in my head and. I don't know how to make it all real.

John: I say, Mary, why don't you call a design company? They will understand what you want and show you some ideas. You'll choose one, and they will help you to find the repairman and select the new furniture and decorations.

Mary: Another great idea from you, John. Miranda's sister works for such a company. I should call her.

John: So what are you waiting for? Do it right now.

Расшифровка

Presenter: Hello everyone, and here we are, back with our daily programme, Five Minutes with a Star. Today in our studio, we have Brenda Black, a renowned TV animation artist. Good afternoon, Brenda.

Brenda: Good afternoon. Thank you so much for inviting me here today.

Presenter: I'm sure our listeners would like to know what you're working on now.

Brenda: Currently, I am working on The Tom and Jerry Show at Renegade Animation. I am also working on several personal projects, one of which can be found on my website. The Secret Garden is a re-imagining of a story about a self-centred young girl who loses her parents in an unfortunate event. She is then forced to live with her distant uncle, where she soon discovers a secret that has been kept locked away for years.

Presenter: That's interesting. Why did you start this one?

Brenda: My reason for starting this project was to challenge myself to build a whole world, including the characters, environments and props, as well as key story moments. However, it was also partially because I enjoy coming-of-age stories that involve character development, growth and a journey of self-discovery.

Presenter: What suits you better, working for a company or freelancing?

Brenda: I enjoy being able to do both because of the variation I can get in terms of clients, pacing and type of work. However, I do prefer working for a company a bit more because I enjoy the process of collaborating and bouncing ideas back and forth with other talented people.

Presenter: What advice would you give to an artist who is dealing with artist's block? How do you boost your imagination and keep yourself creative?

Brenda: I'd say, go out and have some fun. Step away from whatever you are doing and try something new or different. Living a healthy and balanced life is also important, as it helps keep ideas flowing. I personally enjoy being outside, hiking, hanging out with friends, window shopping, playing different sports or just meeting new people. All the little things that you experience along the way will serve as inspirations when creating your work.

The more you discover and observe things around you, the more you will have to draw from when you need ideas.

Presenter: In your opinion, what should a young person take into consideration when choosing an artistic career path?

Brenda: I think a young person should keep an open mind and try out as many things as possible. Don't limit your options when starting out because there are so many things to learn from in all the fields of art. That's not to say that specialising is not good, but I think it will be beneficial to be open to different possibilities, as there is a lot of crossover among them. I think if you keep exposing yourself to various types of art, you will eventually find out what really resonates with you and keeps you motivated, and that will lead you to your artistic career.

Presenter: What do you think of using modern social media and the internet to connect artists directly with their fans?

Brenda: I think it's great that these platforms have helped bridge a gap that used to be difficult to connect. Artists are now able to gain the exposure they need by showcasing their work, and fans can easily find and appreciate the different types of work put out by individual artists. They have also made it much easier for artists to gain inspiration and gather reference material. On the other hand, it may promote bad habits for an artist. It puts pressure on them to create work that would satisfy the public.

Presenter: Thank you, Brenda. It has been very interesting talking to you.

Brenda: Thank you.

A. The English have a very ironic sense of humour, and it may become clear when you discover what some of the towns and villages across England and the United Kingdom are called. Some are hilarious, while others are just plain rude. It is important to keep an eye out when you pass through the English countryside to see if you can spot a few on your travels. There's Sheepy Parva and Sheepy Magna in Lancashire, Greedy Gut in Somerset, No Place in Derbyshire. There is always something to keep people entertained during their trip!

B. England is part of the British Isles and a large archipelago off the coast of Europe. It is not a very big country. In fact, you could fit all the United Kingdom, that is, England, Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland, inside Texas, the USA, over 2.8 times. So, it shouldn't come as too much of a surprise to know that you are never far from the sea when you are in England. In fact, even if you are standing in the very center of the country, you are still no more than 70 miles away from the coast. What a shame that the English weather doesn't often encourage a beach day!

C. Badgers are not always farmer's best friends, but Badger Watch farm in deepest rural Dorset has decided to exploit rather than fight Britain's cutest large mammals. Extremely difficult to spot, a badger seen in the wild is an unforgettable experience. Two specially designed hides at Badger Watch Dorset offer one of the best chances of finding one. Each hide can be booked privately for up to eight people, from 6.30 pm until the lights are shut off at midnight. Alongside badgers, the hides offer a good chance of seeing foxes, deer, and rabbits.

D. Holidays are the best opportunity to explore the UK and overseas territories, spending quality time with family or friends including a four-legged one. In fact, holidays are the best excuse to go on some nice dog adventure and give your dog the best time. To plan your perfect holiday, it's a matter of finding a place suitable for dogs. The good news is that there is more choice than you may think. We found that almost all holiday accommodation and hotels have a filter which you can use to navigate your options, although some are better presented than others.

E. The Hebrides are a beautiful archipelago, where Scottish Gaelic is still spoken. Each day will be a combination of relaxation and adventure. On a full day's excursion, we may spend four or five hours in the kayaks and cover between seven and ten miles, with plenty of opportunities to land and explore islands on foot. One of the best ways to explore its coastline and spot some of the many bird species, otters and seals is by kayak. We can offer full-day guided trips, taking in hidden coves, long sandy beaches, and hidden ancient sites.

F. You never forget your first whale. Such sightings are, of course, down to good fortune and timing, but once you've seen your first whale, you will want to see another and another. Famous for its whaling fleet, the Yorkshire coast is one of the best places in England to spot Minke whales, which appear in late summer, following the mackerel. From the coastline of the Outer Hebrides, you can spot up to 23 species of whales, more than a quarter of the world's 89 known species, which pass through the waters off the west coast of Scotland.

G. In summer the possibility of finding a calm area away from the crowds of holiday-goers can be a difficult task. Known as the Heritage Coast, the Northumberland coast area of outstanding natural beauty is surprisingly crowd-free, even in high summer. If you're willing to relax, you'll find a number of excellent bathing beaches here. Heritage hunters and nature watchers are spoiled with fantastically arresting castles. Most striking is the mighty fortress at Bamburgh. Many architectural historians have declared this the most wondrous of all England's coastal castles.

Edible Gold

I like to think of myself as an open-minded person, someone who is tolerant to those with different beliefs, however wacky they may seem to me. Every rule has its exceptions, though.

A few years ago while traveling in England, I met a woman who asked me if I'd heard of edible gold. I replied that I had, as I'd seen a TV show about chefs using gold leaves as a decorative but edible garnish on dishes. I assumed that's what she was talking about. But she seemed very surprised and in a hushed, conspiratorial tone, began excitedly talking about how the ancient Egyptians had discovered that by eating powdered gold, one could become immortal. Very clearly, she believed this too. OK. I felt that all my good intentions of open-mindedness went out the window — that was just way too strange for me.

Later, when I consulted Google to see if I could learn more about this outrageous claim, I was shocked and dismayed to find thousands of Web pages describing, with great seriousness, a miraculous substance usually referred to as white powder gold. Even though I can't claim the slightest expertise in this esoteric field, I thought I'd make an attempt to distil the essence of these claims for your consideration.

Let's begin with culinary gold. If you walk into your nearest gourmet supply store, you can probably find, for about US$20, a box of gold leaf manufactured expressly to enable you to impress your friends at your next dinner party. These unbelievably thin pieces of nearly pure gold add an impressive touch to chocolates, soups, sushi, or just about anything else you can think of. Because the quantity of gold is so small, the price is reasonable; yet these gold highlights make a meal appear to be extravagant and give restaurants an excuse to charge exorbitant prices.

Some purveyors of mineral supplements sell a gold colloid: a suspension of extremely tiny particles of metallic gold in water. In a gold colloid, each particle contains nine atoms of gold. Its daily dose is enough to provide a wide range of health benefits. Here, at least, there is some research behind it. A few studies found the product to be effective in managing rheumatoid arthritis and also, intriguingly, increasing I.Q. scores. These claims are at least plausible.

Our next step is one decidedly outside the realm of scientific certainty. David Hudson, a farmer living in Arizona, was trying to extract gold and silver from the tailings of an abandoned mine in the mid-1970s. In the process, he found a mysterious substance that defied analysis, despite years of experimentation by reputable laboratories, undertaken at great personal expense. Hudson eventually concluded the white powder was gold in a monatomic state and it has some amazing properties: when heated it can levitate and has a long list of incredible health benefits.

Hudson even received patents in Britain and Australia, though not in the USA. I should interject that the awarding of a patent does not mean that a government agency has successfully reproduced the invention in question, or even that they have validated it as being scientifically sound. Interested in alchemy, Hudson became convinced that his white powder gold was the stuff of many legends. He equated it with “the philosopher’s stone”, and “the food of the gods”, among other things. Hudson believed he had rediscovered an ancient alchemical formula. And, naturally, numerous companies sell solid or liquid forms of “white powder gold” supposedly created using variants of Hudson’s recipe.

The author describes the meeting with the woman as...

- 1) the funniest event in his life.
- 2) a challenge to his open-mindedness.
- 3) a source of his knowledge of edible gold.
- 4) a very mysterious event.

13

Which of the following is NOT mentioned as a reason why restaurants use culinary gold?

- 1) It can be used on various dishes.
- 2) It appears to be an exotic decoration.
- 3) It adds a particular flavour to meals.
- 4) It allows them to raise prices.

The author tends to trust the information about gold colloids because...

- 1) the number of atoms in particles is known.
- 2) it helped with his rheumatoid arthritis.
- 3) he's a specialist in colloids.
- 4) it's backed by some research.

The author refers to the substance found by David Hudson as "mysterious" because...

- 1) it has unusual properties.
- 2) its health benefits are magnificent.
- 3) it was discovered by chance.
- 4) it can be used for any human need.

17

David Hudson thinks that the substance he discovered...

- 1) is not gold.
- 2) is the thing mentioned in legends.
- 3) doesn't need a patent.
- 4) is not for distribution in the USA.

18

From the last paragraph it can be implied that...

- 1) it's very difficult to get a patent in the USA.
- 2) Hudson made alchemy popular again.
- 3) Hudson's discovery wasn't scientifically validated.
- 4) Britain and Australia have similar scientific traditions.

A quiet house

It was April and John Moore was studying for an important examination. As the date of the exam 30 _____ nearer, he decided to go somewhere and read by himself.

He did not want the amusements of the seaside, or the beauties of the countryside. He decided to find a quiet, little town and work there undisturbed. He 31 _____ his suitcase with clothes and books. Then he looked at a railway timetable for a town that he did not know. He found one, and bought a ticket to go there. He did not tell anyone where he was going. After all, he did not want to be 32 _____ .

That is how Moore arrived at Benchurch. It was a market town, and once a week it was quite busy for a few hours. The rest of the time it was a very quiet and sleepy place. Moore spent his first night at the only hotel in the town. The landlady was very kind and helpful, but the hotel was not really quiet enough for him. The second day he started 33 _____ for a house to rent.

There was only one place that he liked. It was more than quiet — it was deserted and very lonely. It was a big, old seventeenth-century house. It had barred windows like a prison, and a high brick wall all around it. It would be hard to 34 _____ a more unwelcoming place. But it suited Moore perfectly. He went to find the local lawyer, who was responsible for the house.

Mr. Carnford, the lawyer, was very happy to rent the house to him. "I'd be glad to let you have it free," he said, ". It's been empty so long that people have started to 35 _____ a lot of foolish stories about it. You'll be able to prove that the stories are wrong.

Moore didn't think it was necessary to ask the lawyer for more details of the foolish stories. He paid his rent, and Mr. Carnford gave him the name of an old servant to look 36 _____ him. He came away from the lawyer with the keys of the house in his pocket.

Dear Oscar,

Thanks for your email. It's great to hear from you again!

Let me answer your questions. Well, I usually eat boiled eggs for breakfast. Actually, my favourite food is sushi because I love Asian cuisine. As for your last question, I find fast food very tasty and I think that it will not make anything worse if you eat it in moderation.

In your email you write that you started reading a book about happiness. Who is the author of the book? When was the book published? Are there any illustrations in the book?

That's all for now. Hope to hear from you soon.

Best wishes,

Regina

38.1

While doing my own project on why some Zetlanders move to big cities, I have found some relevant survey data presented in the form of a table, and in this essay I am going to analyse it and give my opinion on this issue.

According to the data from the table, 34% of the respondents choose the response “To get a new job” as the most important factor for relocating to a megalopolis. “To develop one’s business” is also quite a popular option with 27% of the respondents. Another key feature is that only 5% of the polled Zetlanders choose the response “To make new friends”.

Surprisingly, only 8% of the respondents name the option “To have more entertainment” as their reason for moving to a metropolis, which is significantly less popular than “To get a better education” (26%). It means that modern people prefer improving their career prospects over entertainment.

Unfortunately, one issue that can arise with moving to a big city is increased cost of living. People who move to bustling urban areas may encounter financial stress. Consequently, it leads to decreased motivation to pursue new experiences. I think that in order to solve this problem people should create a realistic budget plan and follow it.

In conclusion, I believe that living in a big city offers many opportunities. Additionally, living in an urban centre can bring a sense of belonging to those who wish to be a part of a constantly developing environment.

Imagine that you are doing a project on what topics discussed on social networks interest Zetland teenagers most of all. You have found some data on the subject — the results of a survey conducted among teenage Zetlanders (see the pie chart below).

Comment on the survey data and give your opinion on the subject of the project.

Write 200-250 words.

Use the following plan:

- make an opening statement on the subject of the project;
- select and report 2-3 facts;
- make 1-2 comparisons where relevant and give your comments;
- outline a problem that one can face with social networks and suggest a way of solving it
- conclude by giving your opinion on the quality of content one can find on the Internet.

Model answer

38.2

While doing my own project on what topics discussed on social networks interest Zetland teenagers most of all, I have found some relevant survey data presented in the form of a pie chart, and in this essay I am going to analyse it and give my opinion on this issue.

According to the data from the pie chart, 22% of the polled teenage Zetlanders choose the response “Celebrities” as the discussion topic that interests them the most. “Films” is also quite a popular option among 25% of those surveyed. Another key feature is that 8% of the poll participants choose the response “Love and friendship” as their preferred topic to chat about on social networks.

Surprisingly, only 10% of the respondents name “Sport” as the subject they are interested to discuss on the Internet the most, which is significantly less popular than “Music” (35%). It means that modern teenagers have a stronger affinity for music over sports and are more likely to engage in conversations about it.

Unfortunately, one issue that can arise with social networks is privacy issues. Many social networking sites collect a large amount of data about their users. Consequently, this information may be stolen. I think that in order to solve this problem people should be aware of the risks of data leaks and protect their information by using strong passwords.

In conclusion, I believe that the quality of content one can find on the Internet can vary greatly. On one hand, there are plenty of informative and well-researched resources available. On the other hand, there is also a lot of misinformation, so users have to be sceptical.
